

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

New Release of the Online Electronic Database www.rarebooks.info

October 3, 2006—Paris, France

Today Rarebooks.info, an electronic database publisher, launched the new release of www.rarebooks.info, which provides more than 80 electronic bibliographies online. Subjects cover early printing, world literature, natural history, science, medicine, theology, cultural and area studies, Judaica, music, theology, art and architecture, among others. Subscribers gain instant access to full digital facsimiles of all electronic bibliographies. Continued content growth will be at no extra charge throughout the current subscription term.

Michel Demont, the CEO of Rarebooks.info, said, "We feel confident that the greater functionality of this new release will attract heightened interest in www.rarebooks.info and lead to a significant growth in our subscriptions. In creating this new release, we have combined advanced technology and attractive design with a more logical user interface to realize better the research resources available on the previous release."

The new release is designed to optimize performance and streamline search capabilities with full-text retrieval software.

Key New features

- New Home Page
- Revised Basic Search, including Boolean, Proximity, and Fuzzy search capabilities
- New Advanced Search, including search capabilities by groups of titles and by topics
- Sort Search Results by author-title or by relevance
- Save your Search Histories
- Consult Search Tips
- Take a Guided Tour
- Search Windows revised for easy use
- MARC Records
- And much more

Pricing and Availability

Rarebooks.info's electronic database is available today on subscription for libraries and individuals. Institutions should address themselves to subscriptions@rarebooks.info or to one of our International Partners listed on the site. Pricing categories for institutions are based on the Carnegie Classification of Institutions of Higher Education. Special pricing is available for Consortia. Individuals can subscribe online. For additional information see www.rarebooks.info.

About Rarebooks.info

Rarebooks.info is an academic publisher of electronic databases. Founded in 2001, the company is privately held and is headquartered in Paris, France.

Media Contact

Adrienne Eaton

subscriptions@rarebooks.info or contact@rarebooks.info