

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

New at www.rarebooks.info
The Digital Library of Reference Works on Rare Books

May 21, 2008—Paris, France

The publisher Rarebooks.info, The Digital Library of Reference Works on Rare Books, has announced the hiring of Joel Thomas as the new Subscription Manager. Trained as a cataloguing librarian and also employed at the Newberry Library, Joel is interested in the place of rare items in a digital environment and associated cataloguing issues. Currently completing his degree in MLIS at Dominion University, Joel is perfectly placed to enter into a dialogue with digital resource personnel, librarians, and faculty members on the utility of Rarebooks.info. Joel works directly with Dr. Sandra Hindman, Director of International Relations, who says “We are so pleased that Joel has agreed to join our team, because we believe his special skills will make him an ideal interlocuter with libraries wishing to subscribe to Rarebooks.info.”

Rarebooks.info is a unique database that now offers 101 titles indispensable for bibliographic research. The titles are available in facsimile for full-text searching by keyword, as well as author, title, date, etc. Users can also search by topics, including Art and Architecture, Catalogues (Sales), Early Printers, Literature, Natural History, and many others.

Perpetual Access Subscriptions are now available for the forthcoming academic year. Current members can roll over their annual subscriptions into Perpetual Access at advantageous rates. New subscribers can still take advantage of special pre-publication pricing through the summer.

Remember the Library Journal gave www.rarebooks.info a “ten” on content alone (“the content is truly extraordinary”) and noted that research libraries “will better serve their clientele” by subscribing to the database. The recent change on our homepage acknowledges the special status of Rarebooks as “The Digital Library of Reference Works on Rare Books.”

About Rarebooks.info:

Institutions that currently subscribe to www.rarebooks.info include libraries in the Northern and Southern Hemispheres from Finland to New Zealand and those extending from East to West from Czechoslovakia and to California. Subscribers now include most national libraries, many university research libraries, as well as other public and private libraries throughout the world.

Founded in 2001, Rarebooks.info is privately held and headquartered in Paris, France.

For further information: joel.thomas@rarebooks.info or contact@rarebooks.info